PUT UP A FIERCE ARTICLE OF BALL

moter ataxia, myopia and melancholia had the heroes of Zion enthralled. When not employed in furnishing amusement for Peterkin or chasing base hits, the Elders were failing to field. It must have been an off day for the gentlemen we have been urged to revere as the only things in the baseball universe. Coming so soon after the altogether happy afternoon on Tuesday, the fall-down was hearthreaking.

gether happy afternoon on Tuesday, the fall-down was heartbreaking. About the only consolation to be de-rived from it is that the visitors did not shut the Elders out, although for a time it looked mightily as if a shut-out was on the books. The Elders chirked up a bit and hit a few out late in the game, after it was too late to win, and managed to scrape up act

That Prof. Dowling was rather effective and ably supported was palpable. Prof. Dowling's game was never in danger, a circumstance of which he seemed fully aware, judging from his great aplomb at all stages. He even felt jolly enough at times to engage in the accient and royal game of badin-age with Prof. Shaffer and Elder Da-vis, those renowned humorists of the national pastime.

Just where the responsibility for such hippodroming rests, the layman cannot be expected to know, but nevertheless may be permitted to surmise that Taylor, who was under the ball, should have caught it. All such things as this, same bag for safe Lake, are the two comment on episodes like that of yesterday is unprofitable, however. The best thing to do is to try to forget it and hope for better days to come.

The same teams play again this afternoon at 3:30. There is not likely to be such a shiftless game again this season and hopes are entertained that the Elders will gather the victory today.

DETAILS OF THE GAME.

Locals Had Hard Work Connecting With Dowling's Curves.

Working hard to shrink his carcass
Down to fighting weight, in order
That he may be smooth and shifty
When he next defends his fitte?
Thave read it all, my children,
And it makes me almost dippy
When I think about the counters,
Hooks, and swings, and jolts, and wilops
Jimmic Corbett has developed—
All the ducks, the feints, and sidesteps
That this Jeffries has invented.
What effete affairs are prize fights,
As they nowadays are practiced?
When my age was sixteen summers, I
was quite a nifty scrapper,
And was greatly interested
In the fighting game, my children,
But, of course, you must remember
That there were no gloves of buckskin
Fo protect the foeman's features.
Just, for instance, let me tell you
of a fight that I once witnessed.
In the land of the Dacotahs
One
of our illustrious sachems,
Known as Young-Man-Gouge-the-EyesOut.
Was insulted by an Injun
By the name of Tar-and-Feathers, Good Dope For Local Scrappers.

One of our illustrious sachems, Known as Young-Man-Gouge-the-Eyes-Out.

Was insulted by an Injun
By the name of Tar-and-Feathers, Who accused him, very wrongly, Of a crooked deal at poker.

Up rose Young-Man-Gouge-the-Eyes-Out, Thus he spake to Tar-and-Feathers:
On the shores of Gitchie Gummie
Is a level stretch of prairie; In the distance is a forest;
We will fight upon the prairie; In the distance is a forest;
We will fight upon the prairie,
To the forest I will chase you!
Tar-and-Feathers was a rowdy,
But at that he was no quitter.
So the challenge was accepted.
By the shining Big Sca Water
All the Eiks and all the Eagles, Knowing well they'd be rewarded.
Now, it seems that Tar-and-Feathers
On a journey down the river
Several days before the contest
Had by chance, met a paleface
Who had given him a pistol.
He had never seen a pistol.
And when Young-Man-Gouge-the-Eyes-Out
Made a pass at Tar-and-Feathers
There was an immense explosion
And a howl from Tar-and-Feathers.
Who, when all the smoke had vanished, was discovered in his corner
With a shattered solar piexus.
In the hurry and excitement
He had aimed the deadly pistol
Wrong end to and pulled the trigger.
This my children, is the story
of a good, old-fashioned prize fight
In the land of the Dacotahs.
In the days when fights meant business:
